Autos Take Bird Toll

Lusk, Wyoming-P-John F. Aler of Lusk has been counting dead; birds and animals along Wyoming liighways for 15 years. It's strickly a hobby, but the counting has convinced him the human traffic foll is nothing compated to the small animal kill. Birds, he said, take the worst beating.

After suggests that cars and trucks. be equipped with plastic nets during the summer months to protect hird ife along the highway. "Beginning July 15 and lasting until the later part of October, the count is three dead birds to the mile. During August the count is up to five birds a mile, and I am sure the dead birds that land in the barrow pits will up these figures by at least a third,"

Alter counted 1.248 rabbits that that lost their lives.
